Things Back to Normal

New York city subway riders who, for lack of reading material, were reduced to staring at each other during the city's longest and most expensive newspaper strike, now have their newspapers again. The strike ended when newspaper deliverymen voted to accept a new two-year contract.

'Never Again—It's Too Much' Says 13,000-Mile Sailor

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) —"Never again," said handsome 34-year-old Peter Tangvald after a harrowing one-man sailing voyage halfway around the world. "It is too much for one man."

He should know. Tangvald sailed his 45-foot wooden yawl, Windflower, from West Mersey, England, to Long Beach, on the southern California coast.

The 13,000-mile voyage took more than 14 months and nearly cost the Los Angeles design engineer his life.

He battled mountainous seas for four days in a hurricane, sailed 31 days without spotting another sign of human life, spent 48 hours at the tiller during a heavy fog without sleep, food or water, and broke two fingers which he bandaged himself.

The bearded mariner, of Norwegian descent, started sailing at 14.

He hadn't planned to make the trip alone. His attractive wife, Lillemore, accompanied him from England to France in the fall of 1957. Rough weather led her to fly home to California.

He set sail for Vigo, Spain. A three-month layover in Spain found him still without a crew, so he set out alone. The Windflower covered the 3,100 miles from the Canary Islands to Antigua in the West Indies in 31 days.

After he passed through the Panama Canal into the Pacific Ocean in August Tangvald ignored advice not to sail along Mexico's west coast in hurricane season.

This was almost his undoing. Halfway to Acapulco a storm with winds raging up to 70 miles an hour struck the vessel.

"It was the one time I regretted making the trip," he says. "I thought it was the end for sure."
